

Ms. Isabel Goode

Chief, Cyberspace Methodology and Mission Assurance Branch

Ms. Isabel Goode currently serves as one of four Branch Chiefs in DEVCOM Analysis Center's Cyber Experimentation and Analysis Division. She began her Civil Service career in 1990 with the Vulnerability Analysis Laboratory which was later reorganized as part of the Army Research Laboratory (ARL). Ms. Goode led several Mine/Countermine programs in addition to a special project involving infrared decoys. Results of her work were published in proceedings for the NDIA's Ground Combat Vehicle Survivability Symposium, the Association of Old Crows' Joint Electronic Warfare Conference, and the International Society for Optics and Photonics.

In 1998, Ms. Goode accepted a lateral assignment as a Test Officer with ATEC at Yuma Proving Ground in Yuma, AZ, where she conducted high visibility programs for the Munitions and Weapons Division and by 2000 she was promoted to Branch Chief for Artillery and Special Projects such as the M777 Lightweight Howitzer, M109 Paladin, and the M982 Excalibur guided projectile. Ms. Goode returned to ARL in 2016 as a Branch Chief with Cyber Electronic Protection Division, a role she holds to this day under the DEVCOM Analysis Center. In addition to her Branch Chief Duties, Ms. Goode also leads her Division's Talent Management initiatives and the Cyber Center for Analysis and Assessment (a partnership with UTEP) that serves as a talent pipeline for high-demand cybersecurity professionals. Ms. Goode also serves as the Contracting Officer Representative for 3 multi-million dollar contracts with UTEP, New Mexico State University's Physical Science Laboratory, and SUGPIAT Defense Group.

Ms. Goode's awards include the Hispanic Engineer National Achievement Award for Military/Professional Achievement (2004), Commander's Award for Civilian Service (2008), and Achievement Medal for Civilian Service (2010).

Ms. Goode received a Bachelor of Science Degree in Electrical and Electronics Engineering from The University of Texas at El Paso. She is a member of the Army Acquisition Corps and is Level III Certified in Test and Evaluation. She lives in El Paso with her children: James (22) and Jocelyn (16).
