

Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army

ARKANSAS

EDWARD G. SALO

Email: esalo@estate.edu

Dr. Edward Salo is a Professor of history, Assistant Chair of the history department, and Associate Director of the Heritage Studies PhD Program at Arkansas State University. He is a former President of the Faculty Senate at A-State. Before coming to Arkansas State, Dr. Salo spent 14 years working for several cultural resources management firms across the US. In addition to his teaching, Ed has been active in defense and national security debate. He hosts the “Sea Control Podcast” from the Center for International Maritime Security, a member of New America’s Nuclear Security Futures Group, and a former research fellow for both the Modern War Institute at West Point and the Joint Special Operations University.

EDUCATION

Dr. Salo received his Ph.D. in Public History and his M.A. in History from Middle Tennessee State University and his B.S. with a double major in History and Political Science from East Tennessee State University. He was also in the first class of Normandy Scholars at the University of Tennessee.

MEMBERSHIPS AND OTHER AFFILIATIONS

Board member of the Royal Historical Society; The Second World War Research Group; The Center for International Maritime Security; Phi Kappa Phi; former board member of Historic Preservation Alliance of Arkansas; Phi Alpha Theta; Advisory Board Member, Hoxie, The First Stand, Inc.; Board Member, Friends of the Library; Advisory Board Member, National Cold War Center; Advisory Board Member, H-War; former member of Nuclear Futures Working Group, New America; Host of the “Sea Control Podcast,” Center for International Maritime Security.

AWARDS AND RECOGNITIONS

Dr. Salo has earned numerous awards for teaching, research, and service during his time at A-State. He has also been a Fellow at the National World War II Museum Faculty Seminar, a Research Fellow at the Modern War Institute at West Point, a Non-Resident Fellow at Joint Special Operations University, and an Attendee at the National Security Seminar at the US Army War College.

ORIGINAL APPOINTMENT

October 2024

