

BRIGADIER GENERAL
DAVID P. GLASER
Deputy Provost Marshal General

Brigadier General David P. Glaser assumed duty as the Army's Deputy Provost Marshal General (DPMG) in June 2013. During his previous 28 years of service, Brigadier General Glaser has served in a variety of Professionally rewarding and developmental positions across the Army in both the generating and operating force.

Past assignments have taken him and his family across the country and world during times of both peace and war from the platoon to the brigade command level. Following graduation from Xavier University in 1985, Brigadier General Glaser received his commission as a Military Police (MP) Officer. As a company grade officer, Brigadier General Glaser served with the 40th MP Battalion at Fort McClellan and with the 95th MP Battalion in United States Army Europe. Following company command he served as a small group Instructor, teaching advanced Law Enforcement techniques and tactics to the MP Officers Advanced Course. In 1993 Brigadier General Glaser was selected for advanced civil schooling where he earned a Masters degree from Syracuse University and was subsequently assigned to Deputy Chief of Staff for Resource Management at the US Army Training and Doctrine Command where he served as both a program manager and executive officer. From 1998-2001 Brigadier General Glaser served in subsequent positions as the 25th Infantry Division Deputy Division Provost Marshal, 25th MP Battalion Executive Officer and Military Police Brigade Pacific Executive Officer.

In July 2001 Brigadier General Glaser assumed duties as the Chief, Army Antiterrorism Branch, Department of the Army G3, a position he held during the 9/11 terrorist attacks. In 2003, he assumed Command of the 519th MP Battalion (Viper 6) in Baghdad, Iraq. While in Iraq, the 519th performed combat support, policing and stability operations focused in Eastern Baghdad with interagency and multinational partners. Upon redeployment Brigadier General Glaser served in dual roles as both Battalion Commander and the Director of Emergency Services at Fort Polk, Louisiana. Following battalion command, he was reassigned as the Chief, Military Police Branch, Human Resources Command in Alexandria, Virginia and subsequently as the Deputy I CORPS G3 pending Brigade command. Six weeks after taking command Brigadier General Glaser deployed his Brigade to Iraq for fifteen months as part of Joint Task Force 134 conducting detention, reconciliation, reintegration and rule of law capacity building operations. Post deployment Brigadier General Glaser served as the 42nd MP Brigade Commander and Joint Base Lewis-McChord Director of Emergency Services. From July 2010 to June 2013 Brigadier General Glaser served sequentially as a Senior Service College Fellow with the Center for a New American Security, Deputy Provost Marshal General (DPMG) and with the Chief of Staff of the Army's, Strategic Studies Group before returning as DPMG.

Brigadier General Glaser has a Masters of Business Administration from Syracuse University, is a graduate of the Reid Institute on Police Techniques and is a member in good standing of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, International Association of Corrections Professionals, American Correctional Association and the International Network to Promote the Rule of Law.
