OFFICIAL SAFETY MAGAZINE OF THE U.S. ARMY

THIS WEEK 26-30 SEPTEMBER 2016

THROWING SHADE

It was the last month of our deployment in Afghanistan and things were pretty routine. My back-seater and I were sitting in our Apache in Kandahar, preparing for an air assault. We were on the auxiliary power unit, ensuring all of our systems were functioning, when I looked to the right and saw something that caught my eye.

INTO THE WOODS

During the land navigation training block, students are encouraged to ask questions. Unfortunately, some Soldiers are unwilling to admit they need help, which often results in a failure on pinpoint day.

PAYING FOR LIFE

It's important to understand ATVs aren't toys. They can be very powerful and fast, and no one should ride them without first having the proper training. Had I ensured my son was trained to ride, this accident might have never occurred.
